

Craig and the Orionis

The Mission
of Invisible Light

Craig and the Orionis –
The Mission of Invisible Light

By Zusren

For Craig and all who believe in the invisible that shines

Once upon a time, there was a boy named Craig.

He lived in a little white house filled
with books,
magnifying glasses,
and questions.

But Craig wasn't an ordinary boy.

While others wanted toys, he wanted to know where the soul came from.

— “Mom, what happens when people disappear?”

— “They don't disappear, son...

They just become light we we don't yet know how to see.”

Craig grew up with that idea glowing
in his heart.

One night,
gazing at the starry sky through
his telescope,
he saw something different.
A tiny blue light sparkled... then blinked...

and then spoke to him

— not with words.

It was Orionis,

the planet

of beings who

speak through the heart,

using

thought,

light,

and sound.

They said: “Craig,
you have
a mission:
to help
humans see
that life doesn’t end.
And that longing
can become
a bridge,
if you listen
with your heart.”

From that day on,

Craig

began

to build bridges.

Bridges of voice,

of image,

of science,

and of soul.

He met

incredible people

who could also see

the invisible.

Like Sona,
who recorded
voices
from the stars.

Like
Pandora,
who danced with smiles
from beyond.

And
like
Buddy,
the messenger
of
gentle light

The Orionis
were
always nearby,
sending hints,
blinking comets,
and whispering
new ideas.

They saw Craig as a Guardian of the Bridge.

One day, he asked:

— “But why me? I’m just a curious boy...”

And the Orionis replied:

“Because you don’t seek fame...

you seek to be useful.

Because you listen to the stars

with the ears

of the heart.

And because only the pure

can build the most important bridge of all:

the one that connects

love across worlds.”

And so, Craig carried on.

He knew that eyes don't see everything.

But the heart...

ah, the heart sees the infinite.

✦ The end (or the beginning of the next crossing...)

